CONTEXT

The school system in many European countries is based on a judgmental approach, with teachers evaluating students' performances on acquired knowledge.

As a consequence the school rejects instead of including, and students with a “poor” performance drop out.

AIM

The aim of the Off-BOOK project is to promote school inclusiveness and the mutual understanding among different cultures as a strategic aim to contribute to the prevention of Early School Leaving.

The innovative element of the project is the introduction of education through performing arts and drama theatre in particular without applying any judgmental approach.

TARGET GROUPS

The main target groups of the project are:

Secondary school students and teachers,
School headmasters and administrative staff,
Policy makers and experts in the field of education.

EXPECTED RESULTS

The main expected project results include:

A guideline for teachers on performing arts to promote integration at school,
A video tutorial for tackling early school leaving through theatrical laboratories.
